Genealogical Lecturer
And Researcher
In-Person and Virtual

I believe family history is more than collecting names and dates—it's about understanding how our ancestors lived, worked, moved, and built their communities.

I am a professional genealogist and speaker with a particular love for land records, homesteading research, and those overlooked record sets that often hold the best clues. I also teach researchers how to maximize FamilySearch, interpret census records, mine newspapers, and use DNA tools effectively.

I currently serve as president of the APG Writers Special Interest Group, a director in the Genealogical Speakers Guild, and Director of the Oakhurst FamilySearch Center.

When I'm not researching or teaching, you'll find me in the Sierra Foothills of California, just south of Yosemite, where history and landscape meet in inspiring ways.
